About myself

I am a freelance translator. I do quality English-Russian-English and Lithuanian-Russian/English translations. I have a diploma in translation (IoLet Diploma in Translation (DipTrans), English-Russian). I have excellent English language and translation skills. My rates are low.

I was born in Lithuania. My mother tongue is Russian, my second language is Lithuanian. I have advanced English language skills, which I acquired during my master and Ph.D. studies at an English-speaking university (Aalborg University, Denmark).

In the past, I worked at another English-speaking university (Free University of Bolzano, Italy) as a computer science researcher. I wrote/edited/proofread research papers and taught in English.

Even before moving to the UK, I used English extensively for almost 10 years: not only at work/for studies (including writing/editing/proofreading research papers), but also in the everyday life (talking to people, reading books and newspapers, watching TV, etc.)
